"You know, I tried to have Kent at this meeting today but..."

he claimed to have an important engagement with some men. What he's possibly doing is wasting a lot of time talking to a lot of important loafers."

Perry White in "The Wedding of Superman," 1955

Mr. White didn't know it, of course, but Clark Kent was there. And to our delight Superman immediately replied with a smile, "Yes, I might find him useful." And that was part of the fun of the Adventures of Superman.

Kent! Come back here! Kent!

adventure... "on the paper's money!" Exasperated beyond belief, there was often nothing left for poor Perry to do but to fire himself!

Watching the Adventures of Superman over these last sixty-five years has been great fun. And coming to know the real people behind many of the characters has been an honor. And so today we gather here to pay tribute to our beloved Noel Neill and Jack Larson... to fondly remember John Hamilton and George Reeves... and to salute everyone connected with what we believe to be the greatest show in television history... the
